Now comes A. Christian Tahan and deposes and says:

1. That I filed in my last Rule 131 Declaration information relating to conception and actual reduction to practice based on newly discovered diskettes.
2. That these diskettes were originally used in a back end server which was given away without my knowledge or consent.
3. That I had previously searched for the computer and material contained therein.
4. That I recently found the diskettes in a storage area prior to the submission of the new Rule 131 Declaration.
5. That the storage area was used for storing unrelated items.
6. That a box containing the diskettes was found in the storage area and the diskettes were not placed there by me.

7. That upon discovering the diskettes I could not read the diskettes because they could not be read on a contemporary computer.

8. That subsequent to the discovery of the diskettes I located a computer that could read the diskettes and this computer was in Massachusetts far removed from where the diskettes were discovered in Moncks Corner, South Carolina.

9. That what is shown in the Supplemental Rule 131 Affidavit is data in these newly discovered diskettes showing a server used for an actual reduction to practice at the home of my father.

10. That the information contained in the last Rule 131 Declaration could not have been provided previously because the information was thought to have been given away.

Further deponent sayeth not.

I further declare that all the statements made herein of my own knowledge are true and that all statements made on information and belief are believed to be true; and further that these statements were made with the knowledge that willful false statements and the like so made are punishable by fine or imprisonment, or both, under Section 1001 of Title 18 of the United States Code, and that such willful false statements may jeopardize the validity of the application or any patent issuing thereon.
